BRIDGE AND CIVIL ENGINEERING CONSTRUCTION

Most people have heard the term civil engineer, yet few know exactly what these highly-trained professionals do. Among other things, they're the heroes who design, build, and maintain bridges, roads, and utility infrastructure. In this article, we'll explore:

Analytical: Engineers must be able to evaluate situations, consider options, and determine how to make things work effectively. This includes finding ways to build better bridges at lower costs, improving traffic flow, and installing utility systems that will last a long time.

Detail-oriented: Engineering projects are made up of countless details. A tiny oversight could lead to calamity. They must understand how the smallest parts of a project work and connect with each other to create sound, stable, and safe structures.

An excellent communicator: Engineers interact with countless people every day, explaining complex concepts in ways everyone can understand.

Curious: The field of engineering is changing all the time. Engineers must be open to exploring different options and learning new things.

Creative: Great bridges and other structures don't just happen. Engineers imagine and design them. It takes a lot of creativity to develop amazing structures like the Golden Gate, the Brooklyn, and the Gateshead Millennium bridges.

A logical thinker: It's one thing to possess unbridled creativity. Engineers must take it to the next level and use logic to pull all the pieces together to bring their ideas to life.

Good with numbers: Every building project is backed up by math. Engineers do complex calculations to ensure structures can withstand gravity and other powerful forces.

A problem solver: Design projects involve solving problems. Bridge engineers have to figure out how to move traffic from one side of a natural or manmade barrier to the other and ensure a structure can withstand forces like hurricanes and earthquakes, all while making sure the bridge is attractive and enhances its natural environment.

A team player: It takes many people to build and maintain bridges. Being able to interact with all personality types is critical for success.

Tech savvy: Engineers utilize complex computer software every day. Being technologically literate is a requirement for the job.

Dear Alamin Bala Ahmed

I am pleased to inform you that, at the meeting of the School of Computing Science Assessment Board which met on 1 July 2013, it was agreed to recommend that you be awarded a BSc Information Technology and Business Information Systems with Lower Second Class Honours.

I enclose a Diploma Supplement, listing your results, with this letter. A formal qualification certificate will normally be sent to you within four months of receipt of this letter; please keep the University informed of your up to date address. In order to assist the speedy despatch of certificates, please try to avoid contacting the Academic Registry with queries regarding this matter as this delays the process. In the meantime, your Diploma Supplement may be used as official confirmation of the qualification you have been awarded.

May I congratulate you on your success and wish you all the best for the future.

Yours sincerely
